

A GUIDE TO PLAYING THE GAME OF

Roosevelt Uno

The trifling makes it more fun.

By Roosevelt Scaggs

Backstory

Originally founded by Roosevelt Scaggs in 2016, this game has been meticulously crafted and refined over more than four years of intense gameplay and development. Further additions, refinements, and testing have been done by Abisola Fasakin, Andrea Galvan, and Christopher Rodolph. Without these three, this game would not be as functional, nor as fun as it is to play.

Each special card and mechanic have a function that was deliberated about. The mechanics of the game and special cards have been considered very carefully to ensure that their functions are coherent, sensible, and practical. Each custom rule and card has a logical corroboration that substantiates its creation and use.

The overall reason for these custom cards and rules are to simply enhance the original UNO game. Explanations for each of the games mechanics are offered in the following pages of this manual.

Custom Game Mechanics

Below are the game mechanics that have been created and cannot be found in the original UNO handbook. Card mechanics are explained further in the next section.

- Jumping

Jumping can be done when a player has a card that is an exact replica of the one that has just been played and is on top of the stack.

In order to jump, the player must say “Jump!” before the next card is placed down. Doing so secures the player’s turn. Once this is done, the player that is jumping is allowed to put their card down, skipping over anyone else who came before them turn-wise. The game then proceeds to the next player that comes after the player that jumped.

EXAMPLES

Example: Player 1 has a green 3 and Player 2 has just played a green 3. Before the next player places their card, Player 1 says “Jump!” and is allowed to place their green 3, skipping over the players in between Player 1 and 2.

EXCEPTIONS

Jumping Your Own Card: You can only jump your own card if the player after you must draw or in 1v1s. Once the next player begins to draw a card, you can immediately say “Jump!” and put your card down. The game then proceeds to the next player.

Super! Card: The Super! card can be used to jump any card played.

Rationale: Jumping adds a distinctive element to the game and can be used to plot with or against other players. Primarily, it adds an aspect of speed. Players must place their cards quickly if they wish to not be jumped; this discourages stalling and long turns. Moreover, it can enable players with a large number of cards to get out more quickly or reduce the number of turns their opponents are able to play.

- Stacking

Stacking can be done with +2s, +4s, or skips. Stacking can only be done with cards that are of the same type. The Clone and Super can also be used to stack. The Clone card doubles the amount that a stack has reached. Jumps can also occur during stacks. Stacking skips only passes the skip on, the number of rounds skipped is always one and does not accumulate.

EXAMPLES

Example: You can't stack a +4 and a +2.

Example: Three +2s of any color can stack to create a +6 consequence.

Rationale: Stacking +2s and +4s is not allowed because that would allow for the potential to stack into a consequence that is unrealistically high.

- Umbrella Protect

The Umbrella card can be used to protect from any consequence including: Swap Hands, any drawing consequence, and any skipping consequence.

Using this card as protection does not count as a players turn and they are still allowed to play an additional card after the consequence has been doled out and it reaches their turn.

The Umbrella protects you for a consequence's ENTIRE lifespan. For example, if a stack comes around to Player 1 and they choose to use the Umbrella, then the consequence skips over them to the next player and CANNOT come back around onto Player 1. In other words, even if the stack comes all the way back around to Player 1, they are still protected and the consequence will always pass over them.

After the consequence is doled out, the play goes back to whoever played the Umbrella and then continues like normal (except when used against a Rainy Day card).

Exception: Umbrella consequence cannot be used to protect from the No Uno consequence.

- Custom Wild Cards

All of the custom wild card consequences (not including the Super! card) can only be used once per round. The Lightning Strike's two consequences can be used once each per round. After they have been used, they can only be used as wild cards. Custom wild card consequences are never required to be used and can be utilized at the discretion of the player playing the card. If a player chooses not to use the consequence, the card functions as a wildcard.

- Calling Out UNO

Players are not required to call out “Uno!” when they play their second to last card. However, if another player calls out “No UNO!” before the next player plays their card (or begins to draw), the player that is caught must draw two cards. Likewise, if a player is falsely accused, the accuser must draw two cards as a penalty.

- Getting Out on a Wild Card

Getting out on a wild card is strictly prohibited under normal circumstances. The only exceptions to this are when an active Clone is used or the Super is used as an active Clone OR regular card. In scenarios involving the clone, the card must be used on top of a non-wild card (since cloning a wild card would just be a wild card).

Basis: This rule was put into place because the strategy of saving a wild card to use as the last card is simply too easy and predictable.

Custom Cards

This card makes all other players draw 5 cards. Can only be used once.

Caveats:

- Can be stacked on with a Super and/or Clone
- Can be blocked by Umbrella
- Does not affect a player being skipped by a Lightning Strike

This card can be used to make the next player draw 12 cards or skip 3 turns. Each consequence can be used once per game.

Caveats:

- Can be stacked on with a Super and/or Clone
- Can be blocked by an Umbrella (on to next player if possible)
- Does not affect a player being skipped by a Lightning Strike

This card can be played as ANY card in the deck, including the cards listed here. Can be used infinite times in a round.

Caveats:

- Cannot be used as a Lightning Strike, Swap Hands, or Rainy Day if they have already been used.
- Similarly, when a Super card is used as one of these cards they will be used for the round. CAN be used to jump and get out of game.

This card can be used to clone whatever card is on the top of the discard stack.

Cannot be used to jump, but can be used to get out of the game if the Clone power hasn't been used already and there isn't a wild card on the top of the discard stack.

This card can be played as a normal green 4 or it can be used to protect against consequences (except for No Uno callouts).

Protects for one entire consequence regardless of whether the stack loops back around. (See Minutiae)

If used against a swap hands, the consequence is cancelled entirely.

Can be used to play one card of each color in one turn. It is not required that all four colors be played. The last card played is the card that takes effect.

Can be used to swap hands with any player, except players who are actively being skipped by the Lightning Strike.

Minutiae

- Consequence cards can backfire.

Basis: Per Precipitation Theory, when you spray someone with water and they have an umbrella, the water would bounce back onto you.

- Umbrella protect for entire lifespan of consequence/stack

Basis: When it rains, you only put your umbrella away after the rain stops. The same applies even with a 1v1, in this case it would be a backfire.

- An umbrella being used for protection cannot be jumped

Basis: Umbrella as protection does not count as a play

- Function of the Umbrella: After the consequence is doled out, the card that was played immediately before the umbrella was used takes effect. The player who played the umbrella then has to play a card that matches the card played before the umbrella was used.

- Lightning Strike Skips during a 1v1

In the case of a 1v1 where one of the players is being skipped, all consequence cards used during the skip period go into the void and do not affect the player being skipped.

Example: A player who is being skipped for 3 rounds by the lightning strike can't have more skips added through the use of skip cards. Any cards played during the skip rounds count towards the 3 round skip.

- Super can be a clone, but a clone cannot be a super

Basis: When a super is used, the player determines its mimicked use. The clone can however clone whatever the player of the super chose, given that it is a reusable card or unused consequence card.
